

Bidvest Noonan launches new security services unit

3 years ago

Bidvest Noonan has announced the launch of a new London-focussed security services business unit. The new business unit will enable Bidvest Noonan to closely align its operations and solutions to its growing portfolio of clients in the capital.

As part of this move, the company has established separate leadership, operations and support teams for its London and national security businesses.

Bidvest Noonan has achieved exceptional growth in recent years. A combination of strong organic and acquisitive growth has seen the business become a market leader for services such as cleaning and security across the UK and Ireland. Today's announcement signals Bidvest Noonan's continued commitment to the London market and to delivering outstanding service and value to clients across all its geographies.

Commenting on the launch, Bidvest Noonan CEO Charlotte Marshall said, " We have built a very strong business in London. Launching our new London security business unit will ensure we stay close to our clients and continue to provide them with the very best support and value in the market."

In the coming weeks, Bidvest Noonan will name a new managing director to lead the business unit.
