SHW has appointed Tarniah Thompson as Head of FM & Sustainability.

With over 10 years' experience working in facilities management for both investors, occupiers and managing agents, including two years at SHW, Tarniah has worked to implement ESG and key Facilities Management initiatives whilst engaging with occupiers and clients to reduce the impact of properties, while improving their performance.

Based in SHW's London office, Tarniah will be responsible for the Facilities Management and Risk Management teams across the firm's network of offices, along with the delivery of its Sustainability service across the Property Management division and supporting the wider business.

Adrian Dack, Partner and Head of Property Management at SHW, comments: "Tarniah has a true passion for ESG/Sustainability. With her background and 'on-the-ground' work in Facilities Management, she has a wealth of first-hand knowledge and success in implementing, managing, and driving forward ESG initiatives at a property level and is the perfect candidate to push forward our continuing work in this area."

Tarniah says: "ESG/Sustainability continues to grow in importance for landlords and occupiers every day. Not purely from a legislative perspective, but also as part of attracting investors, employees, and customers.

"Our sustainability service is focused on helping our clients develop and achieve tangible, sustainable outcomes to fulfil environmental, social and corporate governance across their assets, as well as fostering a true moral belief in the benefits our collaborative efforts contribute to the built environment and
