

ISS supports Official Platinum Jubilee Pageant Commemorative Album

3 years ago

ISS is a proud contributor to an official book marking Queen Elizabeth II's Platinum Jubilee Pageant. Her Majesty The Queen: The Official Platinum Jubilee Pageant Commemorative Album. The publication, launching 5 June 2022, celebrates The Queen's extraordinary 70-year reign.

Providing a unique window into Her Majesty's decades of service, and one of the most extraordinary lives of this or any other era, the book also features a select number of outstanding individuals and organisations from across the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth.

ISS has contributed an article showcasing the importance of frontline placemakers and the difference they make to hundreds of organisations across the UK. The piece also introduces JointForces@ISS — ISS's programme supporting ex-military personnel, service leavers and spouses in securing civilian employment — and explores how recruiting from such an exciting and untapped talent pool can yield great results for businesses, whilst also giving something back to people and families who have done so much for society.

Published by St James's House and written by leading royal commentators Robert Jobson and Katie Nicholl, with contributions by Tom Parker Bowles, the hardback publication will be officially launched at Claridge's and unveiled on The Mall in central London during the Pageant.

Raymond Cooksley, British Army veteran and current programme lead for JointForces@ISS, will attend the book's official gala launch on 5 June at Claridge's hotel in Mayfair.

Liz Benison, CEO for ISS UK and Ireland, said: "ISS is extremely proud to sponsor this impressive publication. The book is a fantastic tribute to The Queen and a great celebration of many outstanding individuals and organisations. We are delighted to have been able to contribute and showcase our brilliant placemakers and JointForces@ISS programme; it has been a real honour."