

Topping out ceremony at One Central Argyle Street as Multiplex reaches milestone

3 years ago

Multiplex has announced that One Central Argyle Street has topped out, marking a major milestone in the project's delivery.

The Multiplex project team, along with representatives from our client Osbourne & Co. and consultant teams came together for a topping out ceremony to mark the occasion.

Designed by Cooper Cromar, the Argyle Street Project is a 15-storey office building. The new development will add an iconic building to the Glasgow skyline within the city centre financial district.

Stuart Jackson, Project Director said:

We are thrilled to celebrate this major milestone which places our team closer to project completion. Located on one of the city's busiest streets and neighbouring Glasgow Central Station, One Central Argyle Street will lend its design to the surrounding historic architecture and stand tall as a prime example of Multiplex's ability to construct high rise buildings within challenging environments.

Multiplex gave special thanks to Woolgar Hunter and Severfield for their work on the structural steel installation and PJCarey on the concrete works. They also thanked the design teams from Cooper Cromar, Gensler, New Acoustics and Atelier 10.
