

JLL appoints Occupier Development Director for UK Industrial & Logistics team

3 years ago

JLL has appointed Emma Kramer as Occupier Development Director within the I&L segment of the UK Markets business – an appointment that will deepen the company’s Occupier Services across 3PL, e-commerce and Life Sciences.

Emma will work with both existing (and identify new) JLL clients by helping them define their real estate strategies unlocking value creating opportunities for other JLL colleagues.

This new role builds on Emma’s extensive experience across the Life Sciences, 3PL and e-commerce sectors, in business development roles at SEKO Logistics and DHL.

Ashely Smart, Head of Occupier Services UK, said: “We are thrilled to have Emma Kramer join the expanding Occupier Services Team. Emma has an excellent track record working within the logistics, freight, e-com and Life Sciences sectors where she will be focusing immediately within her new role to support client growth and transition.

“The growing life sciences/ pharma sector has a clear link to supply chain and global distribution, and JLL is increasingly supporting clients identify new manufacturing and warehousing infrastructure(s), as well as network design and location advisory in order to serve both B2B & B2C clients. Logistics and Life Sciences has never had a closer relationship, which Emma will be leading on behalf of JLL I&L.”
