

Cloudfm rises up the PropTech 50 rankings

3 years ago

Cloudfm has reached 39 in the PropTech50* rankings for 2022. This is up six places from last year's inaugural charts.

Since the achievement of our Queens Award for Enterprise in the category of Innovation in 2019, to being named in key research listings from Gartner, CloudFM's impact on the sector's PropTech development continues to gain pace.

Speaking recently of the developments, CEO Jeff Dewing said: "Our technology developed in-house allows absolute transparency and visibility, coupled with a game-changing element of cost control. It underpins the best people and the most efficient processes – there are no gaps in information, no manipulated data, no deleting, or hiding or removing. What you see is true."

*PropTech50 (in association with OBI), is the annual ranking of the UK companies creating original technology for real estate, construction, the built environment and building management.

From a 117-strong shortlist, the final ranking was decided by a combination of selections from an independent judging panel (see below), an innovation rating generated by the Unissu community via its UniScore PropTech data platform and a public vote among readers of BusinessCloud

- Sammy Pahal, managing director, UK PropTech Association
- Paul Unger, editor, PlaceTech
- Maria Wiedner, CEO, Real Estate Women and Cambridge Finance
- Jonathan Symcox, editor, BusinessCloud
