Intrepid team members from Birmingham building services provider J S Wright has raised more than £4,200 for their adopted charity after completing an epic challenge in the Lake District.

Twenty-six staff and three suppliers tested their fitness, commitment and determination by taking part in the Lakes Triple Challenge in aid of Warwick-based Molly Ollys, which cares for children with life-threatening illnesses.

They cycled through the trails of Grizedale forest, trekked to the summit of the 803-metre-high Old Man of Coniston and kayaked across Coniston Water, one of the UK's largest lakes, covering more than 24 miles over an eight-hour period.

J S Wright Director and Team Leader David Cook said: "This was an incredible achievement after our staff and suppliers endured a day of testing and gruelling challenges. We were all proud of our efforts for such a great charity."

David added: "Thanks go to all those who made donations - and it isn't too late to donate by visiting www.justgiving.com/fundraising/jswrightmollyollyswishes."

Molly Ollys provides emotional and financial support, where appropriate, to children throughout the UK with terminal and life-threatening illnesses.

Rachel Ollerenshaw, Co-founder of Molly Ollys, commented: "The J S Wright team are made of tough stuff! From this particular fundraiser, they have raised enough for us to do eight wishes for eight children facing terrifying health challenges - we can't thank them enough."

Staff from J S Wright and its sister company Wright Maintenance have now raised more than £6,200 for their chosen charity this year from events including a sponsored football match, a one million steps marathon, a virtual walk to the company's London office, and a dress down day before the Jubilee Weekend.
