NEBOSH's 2022 online conference shines a light on safety, health and happiness, offering learning opportunities for professional and personal growth.

This year's event features representatives from the Health & Safety Executive, IIRSM and the British Occupational Hygiene Society plus experts in mindset, psychology, risk, wellbeing and much more.

The conference blends the technical and soft skills required by HSE professionals, with personal growth and happiness so that our community can develop the tools they need to lead fulfilling personal and professional lives. The main agenda is accompanied by on-demand content covering 'Empowering women in our profession' and qualification taster sessions, with more sessions to be confirmed.

The free-to-attend conference takes place on 26 October 2022 and registration is open now at www.nebosh.org.uk/online-conference/

Andy Wilkinson-Sharpe, NEBOSH Interim Chief Executive says: "Wherever you are in the world, whatever stage you're at in your career and whatever sector you work in, this conference will have something for you.

We're committed to providing learning and education beyond our qualifications. That's why we've partnered with a great line-up of speakers who have advice and expertise to share with our global community."
