

BAM appoints new Managing Director of its Integrated Facilities Management business

2 years ago

BAM has appointed Abbe Pickthall as Managing Director of its Integrated Facilities Management business.

Abbe Pickthall has held senior roles in a number of global integrated service businesses, including CBRE, Mitie and ENGIE.

She is highly experienced in leading organisational transformation, including structural and cultural change.

Abbe Pickthall, Managing Director, Integrated Facilities Management, said: "I'm delighted to be leading BAM's Integrated Facilities Management business, this is a fantastic opportunity for us to refocus and transform our service offering, to establish what our customers expect and how, acting collaboratively, we can deliver those needs using sustainable and innovative technologies.

"Our industry is constantly evolving and expects decarbonisation commitments and energy efficient solutions whilst providing an unrivalled end-to-end service. The team and I look forward to growing the business across both public and private sectors."

BAM's integrated facilities management business is part of Royal BAM Group's BAM UK and Ireland division, which also delivers construction, civil engineering, property development, design and other services.
