

Jaguar Building Services appoints new Energy Manager

3 years ago

Jaguar Building Services is delighted to announce Adam Nguyen's recent promotion to Energy Manager.

Adam started his career with Jaguar in 2016 as a Technical Services Assistant. Over the last 6 years, Adam's role has significantly developed, and he has proven his skills within the field. His new role will involve analysing energy consumption and carrying out energy surveys to identify and implement energy saving opportunities across Jaguar's portfolio.

Tony Jackaman, Technical Director commented: "Adam is assisting several of our customers with their transition towards Net Zero. Our clients appreciate Adam's dedication, tenacity, and expertise, regularly providing excellent feedback on the service he delivers."

Adam said: "Energy is an important topic right now. We are wholly committed to helping our clients reduce their energy usage. By streamlining data collection processes and carrying out systematic inspection and analysis of energy consumption, we intend to understand and lower our customers' expenditure and carbon footprint."
