

JLL appoints Chris Legg to join its Cost Management Team

4 years ago

JLL has appointed Chris Legg to join its Cost Management team, focusing on the Life Sciences sector. Chris' role will involve the further development of JLL's existing capabilities in Life Sciences across project development and delivery, supporting its continued growth.

Chris has extensive, cross sector experience spanning across commercial real estate, pharmaceutical and infrastructure sectors. Over the past 12 years he has delivered a range of complex and high-profile developments in addition to Capital Planning programmes at a role he most recently held at CBRE as EMEA PMO commercial lead within a multinational client. He has also held previous roles with Gardiner and Theobald, Arup and Transport for London.

Chris Legg, Associate Director – Cost Management (Life Sciences) at JLL said, “I’m excited to be joining JLL’s Cost Management team, specialising in the Life Sciences sector and am looking forward to building upon JLL’s market leading presence. Cost Management advice and market insight is key to developing the best solutions for our clients, from supporting early-stage investment decisions through to successful project delivery. I’m looking forward to collaborating with the wider team and building on the existing strong platform of success.

Chris Walters, Head of UK Life Sciences at JLL, added, “The expansion of the Cost Management team and a dedicated Life Sciences expert will help us enhance our end-to-end service for our clients, ensuring that investors leverage our market knowledge, maximising return on their investments. Chris brings along a breadth of knowledge and expertise on the market and will be a real asset to the Life Sciences team.”