

CorkSol appoints new Surveyor to drive regional sales

3 years ago

Yorkshire-based sustainable coatings distributor, CorkSol, has recently welcomed Andy Charlton to the team as a surveyor, helping to drive sales for the SprayCork product across residential projects.

Andy will be pushing forward the company's growth across the region, meeting with customers to provide a free home survey and talk in more detail about the unrivalled benefits of SprayCork, before liaising with local approved applicators to deliver each job.

Andy will combine his new role with running his company, AC Plastering, which has been trading for 20 years, as well as AC Eco Coatings, which was launched back in 2020 to bring sustainable render alternatives to the homeowner after he discovered the SprayCork product.

Andy comments: "SprayCork is completely unique; there is nothing quite like it on the market. Not only does it boost curb appeal, transforming tired or damaged facades with ease, it dramatically improves acoustic and thermal performance. Particularly given the current climate and rising energy bills, this is of huge interest to homeowners, giving SprayCork the advantage over traditional quarried renders. I'm really optimistic about getting out on the road and making more people aware of this fantastic product."

Joff Ward, Managing Director at CorkSol, adds: "We have recently started executing local campaigns to help drive new enquiries, so with Andy on our side, we can help push business through quicker. He is a true advocate of the product, and we have complete confidence in him to champion the benefits of SprayCork, using his passion and knowledge. We're delighted to have welcomed him to the team, and he is already proving to be a strong asset to our brand."
