

Matthew Dean, Product Development Manager, achieves cleaning industry's highest achievable award recognition

4 years ago

ISS is proud to announce that Product Development Manager, Matthew Dean, has secured the Chartered Practitioner Award from the Worshipful Company of Environmental Cleaners.

The Worshipful Company of Environmental Cleaners is a membership organisation for environmental cleaners and associated businesses. Acknowledging the UK cleaning industry's highest standards of professionalism, the company received a grant of royal approval in 2021, this chartered status now allowing its members to confer the award of Chartered Practitioner.

As such, the team at ISS is delighted to announce that the title of Chartered Practitioner has this year been awarded to Matthew Dean, ISS Product Development Manager. The accolade, renowned as the highest achievable recognition in the cleaning industry, recognises outstanding contributions, performance and commitment to the wider cleaning sector.

Matthew's award is the result of a 15-year cleaning industry career, which began with a training and education role within the facilities management industry. Since then, Matthew has gone from strength to strength, joining the British Institute of Cleaning Services (BICSc) in a senior role; helping the CleanEvent Senior Leadership team and delivering contract work for such venues as Wembley Stadium, Silverstone, Liverpool Football Club and Cheltenham racetrack; becoming Head of Cleaning for Lancashire County Council; and joining ISS in March 2020, taking on the Operations Performance Role.

In receiving the Chartered Practitioner award, Matthew has demonstrated a remarkable contribution to the cleaning sector and continues to support ISS's wider company ambition: to help staff become the workers they want to be and become a part of something even bigger. You can find out more about ISS' employee values over on our Culture page.
