

Securitas Technology launches to drive future of security

2 years ago

Securitas Technology, a world-leading provider of integrated security systems, has officially launched, bringing together the electronic security expertise and capabilities of Securitas and STANLEY Security.

The announcement comes after Securitas' acquisition of STANLEY Security in July 2022. Now, Securitas Technology is poised to redefine the future of the industry.

"We're thrilled to officially launch Securitas Technology and share with clients the tremendous value we bring as a security partner," says Securitas Technology Global President, Tony Byerly. "We have three distinct advantages as a global provider: our people, technology and knowledge. I'm incredibly proud of the organisation we're building together and the rich history and deep industry expertise that help make us a leader in the market."

Adding to this, UK Commercial Leader, Vincent Poty says: "With Securitas Technology, we are creating something different and unique in electronic security. It reflects our sense of service, technology expertise and capacity for innovation, that together will support our clients in a changing world."

"It is a hugely exciting time for all involved and we can't wait to show people the potential Securitas Technology can help them to realise – as clients, as employees, and in many other capacities," concludes UK Head of Electronic Security, Arthur Agnew.

Securitas Technology employs approximately 13,000 people across the globe, including more than 5,100 field technicians, with over 500 colleagues in the UK.

Its customisable solutions – including a full suite of video, access, intrusion, fire and integrated systems and services – are designed to adapt and expand in line with organisations' evolving security needs. From design and installation to monitoring and analytics, Securitas Technology has the knowledge, certifications and experience needed to help organisations:

Protect their people, property and assets

Connect and integrate their technologies

Optimise their security operations for maximum efficiency

“Our purpose to help make the world a safer place remains, and that starts with ensuring clients are at the heart of all we do,” Byerly says. “As a fully integrated business focused on security technology, we are well-positioned to unlock even more value for our clients – whether they’re local, regional, national or global and have a single site to secure or need a complex and comprehensive multisite enterprise security program.”

Securitas Technology serves organisations of all types, sizes and varying security risks. For more information on its solutions and services, visit securitastechnology.co.uk.