

Anabas wins British safety Council International Safety Award

2 years ago

Corporate office FM specialist Anabas has won an International Safety Award from the British Safety Council in recognition of its commitment to keeping its employees and workplaces healthy and safe.

Now in its 65th year, the International Safety Awards recognises and celebrates organisations from around the world which have demonstrated their commitment to preventing workplace injuries and work-related ill health.

Led by Anabas account manager Richard Bostelmann, the award was given to the company's FM team at global advertising and media giant WPP's iconic Sea Containers building in London.

Mr Bostelmann said: "I am thrilled that we have been awarded a merit for the International Safety Award. The award is reflective of the fantastic work the Anabas team does at Sea Containers, which includes the diligence to processes and the maintenance of our safety culture.

"The award is also a direct result of the guidance and governance provided by Anabas, and I am immensely proud of the achievement."
