3 years ago

Yorkshire-based sustainable coatings distributor CorkSol has recently appointed Richard Hitchcock as operations manager with responsibility for identifying and activating new strategies to accelerate the company's presence within the building sector.

Previously an independent consultant, he has extensive experience of senior management roles across a wide range of industries from retail and manufacturing through to the charity sector, and has successfully provided strategic advice to a number of similar sized organisations looking to supercharge their growth plans and streamline their development.

In his role, Mr Hitchcock will focus on supporting the company in achieving its ambitious goals by developing and implementing a strategic growth plan to ensure the business can succeed within the constantly evolving green build sector.

He said: "Now is the right time to accelerate Corksol's growth plans. The company has made serious inroads into the green build sector, with even more success to come as an ever-increasing number of developers, specifiers and homeowners turn to eco-friendly solutions. Working alongside the experienced senior team at CorkSol, there is huge potential to accelerate the company to the next level as we strive to become a trusted and recognised brand for anyone looking for a sustainable alternative to render."
