

Amey awarded a place on its sixth public sector framework in under a year

2 years ago

Amey, a provider of integrated facilities management and project services, has been awarded a place on Pagabo's National Framework for Refit and Refurbishment Solutions – which will facilitate the delivery of essential enhancements to key public sector estates.

The framework, which was awarded last month, will run over four years from May 2023 and will provide a compliant and collaborative route to market for public sector clients, such as the NHS and Police authorities, to procure refurbishment works.

With a total value of £1 billion the framework has been split into five value-based lots. Amey has secured over 60 places across 4 lots, offering the opportunity to deliver projects from £50,000 – £15 million.

Pagabo and Amey have a shared focus on decarbonisation, energy, sustainability, and social value. Each of these areas will be top priority on delivery of works.

Paul Lewis, Amey Secure Infrastructure's Strategic Accounts Director, said: "This opportunity aligns with Amey's desire to collaborate with existing and new clients to better understand sector challenges and needs. Through this framework we will help customers meet their net zero mandates and ensure the UK infrastructure is secure, compliant, clean, and future proofed."

Amey brings further synergy to the Pagabo procurement body through its £1.7bn annual SME spend and favourable payment terms – which allows the organisation to deliver at speed and scale.
