2 years ago

Technology provider Taconova has announced its intentions to develop its business interests in the UK after completing the acquisition of the business activities of Heatlink Technical Solutions and Heatlink Client Services last year.

The acquisition signalled the company's intention to make the UK a key strategic market, and managing director Phil Harrison has reiterated that commitment.

"We have created an excellent basis for an even stronger presence in the UK," he said. "We specialise in intelligent building technology solutions that offer high energy efficiency with lower operating costs, and we stand for quality and durability.

"We plan to serve all market segments, such as wholesale, OEM, and project business. Our proven turnkey solution delivers the ultimate integrated solution. It offers our high energy efficient HIU with an integrated smart meter solution that captures and monitors live energy efficiency 24/7.

"The larger organisational structure will enable us to make even better and faster progress and offer our customers and partners new solutions – vitally important in an industry that requires constant revision of technology and services."

The company stated it is committed to providing reliable, refined, low-maintenance technology, and excellent value for money to designers, planners, installers, and, ultimately, end-users.
