

Metropolitan Police awards significant cleaning contract

2 years ago

Churchill has won a wide-ranging three-year contract with the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS). The contract has the option to extend for another two + two years and will see the company's cleaning operatives deployed across 351 buildings in all 32 of London's Boroughs.

It already had significant experience in the blue light sector, understood the security sensitivities around people engagement, and was adept at complex mobilisations.

The contract has more than 350 staff, including management and a dedicated helpdesk that will oversee the cleaning operation in and out of hours, seven days a week.

The MPS wanted to make a change in its approach to cleaning and the company was successful in the tender process for a number of reasons. Its local presence and commitment to the communities it works in is essential in a city where each borough is so distinct from the next.

Environments for the cleaning teams include but are not limited to HQ, offices, custody suites, kennels, and stables. Specialist and reactive cleaning teams will also be deployed when necessary to areas such as forensic tents and operational vehicles. London managing director Mr said: "We are delighted to be partnering with the Met Police in what is a major contract win for Churchill. The range of environments and scope of work is so broad that this work can only be delivered by a combination of specialist teams and innovative technology platforms. This is the type of work that we love to deliver, and we can't wait to get up and running."
