

JLL makes strategic appointment to support growing Property and Asset Management (PAM) business

3 years ago

JLL has appointed Colin Curnow as its Head of Consulting for PAM.

In his newly created role, Colin will scale JLL's strategic Property and Asset Management offering for the Life Sciences sector and will strengthen the company's end-to-end service for clients. Alongside the Life Science sector, Colin will also be responsible for overseeing JLL's Design for Management and Flex Operations offering.

Colin brings extensive knowledge to the role, having been with JLL for 28 years, working in a variety of key roles across PAM. In his most recent role as Premium Services FM Director, Colin was instrumental in securing important client wins such as 22 Bishopsgate with AXA, 40 Leadenhall Street with M&G, and the renewal/expansion of our mandate with Old Park Lane Management.

Colin Curnow, Head of Consulting for PAM at JLL said, "I am excited to take on this new challenge and look forward to working with our teams to provide innovative solutions that meet our clients' evolving needs."

Jordan Jeffery, COO and Deputy Head of Property & Asset Management at JLL said, "Colin's ability to align service delivery to our clients' requirements and meet their key strategic objectives has been evident throughout his career at JLL. We are delighted to appoint him to this new role, which reflects our continued commitment to providing added value client services."
