2 years ago

Arsenal Football Club, one of the world's biggest professional football clubs, has renewed its security vetting contract with Mitie for a further five years.

The contract extension will see Mitie continue to provide essential vetting services include background checks, criminal records checks and Disclosure and Barring Service (DBS) checks.

As one of the world's biggest football institutions both in history and stature, Arsenal places a strong emphasis on employee security and safety and requires stringent background checks on current and prospective employees. As part of the contract, Mitie's market-leading vetting business, Procius, will undertake a suite of vetting services underpinned by its bespoke vetting technology platform, MyCheck™.

MyCheck™ will be used to carry out a plethora of background checks including digital identity verification, CV and right to work checks, as well as verifying employment and education history. This contract extension demonstrates continued confidence in Mitie's security vetting expertise and its technology-led approach to background screening.

Jason Towse, Managing Director, Business Services, Mitie, said: "As a market-leading vetting services provider, we're proud of our great relationship with a football club of Arsenal's stature. We're looking forward to continuing to provide exceptional vetting services backed by our smart technology solutions."
