

Masons' governing body renews cleaning contract

2 years ago

London cleaning service provider Julius Rutherfoord & Co has retained one of its contract with the United Grand Lodge of England (UGLE), following a competitive tender procedure.

The company reported it embarked on its partnership with the UGLE, which is the governing body of Freemasonry, in September 2016. The Premier Grand Lodge was founded in London in 1717 and its UGLE identity in 1813.

With a global membership of 175,000 and over 7,000 Lodges, it occupies a unique place of influence. Its headquarters is at Freemasons' Hall, a Grade II listed Art Deco building on Great Queen Street in Covent Garden, London.

The company is tasked with continuing to provide cleaning and washroom services to the Covent Garden facility. It reported the renewal was due to its ability to deliver and excel at customer service; its proactive cleaning approach and the flexibility it demonstrates in its day-to-day service offering.

UGLE director of building services Richard Jewitt said: "We are very pleased that JR&Co has been reappointed as our contract cleaner. Over the last seven years, its on-site team has consistently delivered very high standards day in, day out for us, and has looked after our unique building, so it is always clean and always looking great."

Managing director Chris Jarvis said: "The extension of this contract is testament to the hard work of our dedicated people. At JR&Co, we believe that our business success is based on the service delivered by our expert teams, which is why we pay such great attention to making sure that they are rewarded and recognised."
