2 years ago

Hard service provider Pareto founder and vice chair Andrew Hulbert has been recognised in the Global Diversity List 2023 as an Inspirational Role Model. Published in the Guardian newspaper, the list covers a plethora of different people, backgrounds and initiatives.

The biennial list celebrates the people from all sectors who work tirelessly to ensure that diversity and inclusion are at the heart of everything they do. Founders of the list include world leading brands such as Barclays, Coca Cola and KPMG.

The Global Diversity List is considered the gold standard for diversity around the world. All organisations and leaders who wish to be seen as credible corporate players in the field of diversity will be required to be accredited by this standard.

Its belief is that by both promoting these core values, and acknowledging those individuals who go the extra mile to ensure a fair playing field for all, it can help advance the diversity agenda so that all members of the community feel they each have an equal stake in wider society.

Mr Hulbert said: "This is one of the proudest moments of my career. To be recognised amongst some of the most inspirational people in the world has just blown me away. Diversity and inclusion for me, has always been about doing the right thing, and to be recognised for this is just inspirational. I could not be more proud of the incredible business we built in Pareto and how it is changing the sector in facilities management. We have an incredible senior leadership team that continue to drive change with purpose and value. Thank you so much to everyone that was involved. I couldn't be happier."
