

Can you help shape the future of workplace wellbeing support?

2 years ago

The Institute of Occupational Medicine and British Safety Council are working together to take a fresh look at how organisations can better support the health, safety and wellbeing of their workforce.

Having conducted in depth interviews IOM and BSC are now seeking insight from those with accountability for workforce wellbeing, such as senior leaders, HR managers, wellbeing coordinators, or health and safety managers.

You can contribute to the future of workplace wellbeing support by completing this survey by the 29th of February.

BSC worker wellbeing survey \(surveymonkey.com\)

For further information or inquiries about this collaborative study, please contact Rebecca Canham, Principal Investigator at the Institute of Occupational Medicine (Rebecca.canham@iom-world.org) or the British Safety Council's policy team (policy@britsafe.org).