

Fire and security general manager appointed by Johnson Controls

1 year ago

Technology and product provider Johnson Controls has confirmed it promoted Sarah Dixon to the position of general manager, fire and security. It reported that she brings a wealth of leadership knowledge and expertise in leading the commercial success of the business.

In 2020, Ms Dixon joined the company as fire suppression general manager and after a two-year tenure was promoted to enterprise sales director UK&I. In her new role, she will enable the fire and security team to deliver sustainable growth whilst enhancing and digitalising the customer journey, driving the smart, healthy and sustainable building evolution.

During her time with the business, she has led her team in driving double digit growth for the fire suppression business. Ms Dixon is also reported to have delivered on digital and sustainable outcomes for customers as enterprise sales director.

“Sarah has an exceptional track record in strengthening teams and driving growth at Johnson Controls, and we are delighted she is continuing her career within the fire and security business,” said vice president and general manager Andy Ellis. “I’ve built so many great relationships and learnt from the best in my time so far at Johnson Controls. I am honoured I can still progress here and continue to work with leaders in the industry,” said Ms Dixon.