

SPG-Group presents 2024 Golf Networking Series Focused on Building Genuine Connections in the FM Industry

1 year ago

In the dynamic landscape of modern business, success is not just about what you know; it's equally, if not more, about who you know. Therefore, the importance of networking cannot be overstated and isn't merely a buzzword. It's a strategic necessity that can propel individuals and organisations to unparalleled heights.

The challenge can be finding the right environment, where building meaningful relationships is easy, and business opportunities flow. SPG-Group stands out by offering senior FM professionals a relaxed atmosphere centred around a shared passion for golf—an ideal setting for fostering genuine connections.

And what better way to build lasting relationships and look after your mental health than an afternoon outdoors walking around a golf course? Throughout the year, SPG-Group hosts six events across the country as part of its Golf Networking Series, providing a conducive space for relationships to evolve organically.

These events offer a relaxed environment with no pushy salespeople that help you get the most out of networking with top calibre FM business leaders. Krys Stanton, the event organiser, ensures that all attendees connect with relevant people, on the golf course, or in the bar afterwards!

For those interested in taking your businesses to the next level, hear what some of the Golf Series' current members say:

Scott Rogers, Managing Director – JSM Building Solutions, said: "Having been part of the Golf Network

Group for the last two years, I have connected with senior people who can add value to my own business and new clients who are now providing repeat business opportunities. A room full of relaxed senior people who can make things happen. Our place was booked as soon as the 2024 itinerary was published and from someone who saw little value in networking prior to being part of this, I cannot recommend this forum enough."

Stephen Peal, Group Managing Director – YorPower, said: "YorPower were very keen to get involved in the SPG Golf Days for many reasons. Firstly, it is an exceptionally well attended event with key decision makers in the property industry, the networking opportunities are second to none. The carefully chosen courses are fantastic, the whole event is very well run with great food, a trick shot golfer showing his skills and hosting the event along with prizes that give great exposure to the sponsors. This event is also carbon neutral which aligns it with our business practices as we too work alongside Neutral Carbon Zone to reduce and offset our emissions."

James Cairns – HVAC Recruitment, said: "HVAC Recruitment were given the chance to sponsor the 2023 Series after participating in the 2022 events, which gave us a chance to invite more clients as well as meet other people we wouldn't necessarily brush shoulders with at networking events. We have had great feedback from every client we took on these days and they've all commented on how efficient the events were."

Stephen Mulvihill, Business Development Director, Fleetsolve, said: "The SPG Golf series has been a great way to network with like-minded people in our industry in 2023. Its well organised events ensure a seamless, enjoyable day with plenty of time to network and meet a range of professionals as the numbers and quality of individuals never fails to impress. We look forward to the 2024 series and catching up with faces old and new to develop business opportunities going forward, sharing a passion for both golf and sustainability."

So, are you ready to make lasting connections and explore new opportunities in business?
