

Ward continues expansion in the North

2 years ago

Ward is pleased to share that it has taken on more office space located in the heart of Manchester, in the vibrant Spinningfields area.

The firm's continued growth across the North West created the need for a more local office space. Located within a minutes' walk of the vibrant Spinningfields area places its management team in the heart of Ward's service offerings.

Similarly to its Birmingham office space, it has also opted for a flexible set-up in Manchester, meaning it is able to adapt quickly to changing requirements, as needed, whilst also being able to offer employees a workspace that suits their needs.

Compared to a traditional office setting, a flexible approach to working is not only more innovative, but it also cuts down on carbon emissions and enhances social value. As a social value business, being in Manchester allows Ward to be better connected with the local community and add benefit, where it can.

As a company that focuses on driving sustainability through actions, it has selected an office building that has achieved BREEAM Excellent, and an EPC A. In addition to this, flexible working enables Ward to grow the business, whilst being more sustainable.

Dan Liddiard, Managing Director for Regions and Canine, comments, "The expansion to Manchester reflects our continued growth and investment in the area. Going for a flexible office space was a decision we made, for many reasons. But most importantly, it is a far more sustainable way of working, something we hold of high importance at Ward.

This is another fantastic step for Ward, and I'm so pleased we've made this move. Not only does it strengthen the support we can provide for our clients, it provides a workplace for the team, and it also gives us the opportunity to drive our social responsibility in the local community”.
