

Atlas Security strengthens Management Team

2 years ago

Due to significant growth in Scotland and the Midlands, Atlas Security is proud to announce investment in two new leaders as part of its exciting growth plans.

Emmanuel Fadunmoye has joined the business as Security Account Manager for the Midlands region and brings a wealth of experience, having spent 20 years in the security sector. His main role revolves around the retention of existing contracts and the mobilisation of new ones, ensuring high standards of service delivery.

James Fullerton has joined as Account Manager for Scotland, having spent 8 years as a Royal Marine, followed by roles in close protection, anti-piracy, contract management and security technology. James is responsible for security operations and account management.

Gary Stanton, Managing Director Atlas Security, said: "Atlas Security has grown from being a quality London business to now offering those quality services to clients in other regions. We provide significant services in the North West, and are investing for growth in Scotland and the Midlands. I am very pleased to have Emmanuel and James on board, strengthening our management team and supporting our development."