

UKGBC launches 'So What Can I Do?' video guides to sustainability

1 year ago

UKGBC's Learning team has been working in close collaboration with CBRE to deliver these new video guides series – a new learning resource launching today that will be available for members only on the members portal.

This new series of six videos focuses on different topics, to help members understand core concepts of creating a sustainable built environment, providing context and innovative solutions on how to take action inside their organisation to radically transform the sector.

This set of video guides covers:

1. Sustainability in the built environment
2. Climate Mitigation
3. Climate Adaptation
4. Nature and Biodiversity
5. Resource Use and a Circular Economy
6. Health & Wellbeing and Social Value.

These resources are designed to encourage our members to take action towards a more sustainable built environment, through personal stories from our team on how they started their journey driving change.

Discover the videos here.

If you're not a UKGBC member, you can access the first video here.

Joe Pitts-Cunningham, Experiential Learning and Events Manager at UKGBC said: “We are really pleased to bring you this new learning video series to members, adding to our Level 1 Building Knowledge portfolio. Working in collaboration with CBRE, we have created learning videos that take a different approach. Using personal stories from our team and featuring 16 expert voices from our membership, we are aiming to galvanise action across our membership to support our collective need to radically transform the sustainability of the built environment”.

Find out more about this new video series here If you’re not a UKGBC member, you can access the first video