

Atlas wins new contract with the Bank of England

11 months ago

Atlas has been awarded a large new cleaning and associated services contract at the Bank of England, following a competitive tender process. The Bank of England is the UK's central bank, and the contract covers several sites including the world-famous headquarters on Threadneedle Street, the Bank of England Museum and production offices in Essex.

The agreement is for a range of support services including office cleaning, housekeeping and washroom services, as well as specialist heritage cleaning associated with maintaining a Grade 1 Listed Building. Additional services include pest control, abseil window cleaning, industrial cleaning and grounds maintenance. The service delivery is underpinned by the highest levels of security clearance and vetting.

The contract was awarded to Atlas due to the company's highly trusted and motivated team members, demonstrable quality services, and a focus on operational excellence through new technology, sustainable best practice and value for money. Including the acquisition of Lewis and Graves, which previously provided services, Atlas has been continuously working with the Bank for 15 years.

Martin Fitch, Managing Director of Atlas London commented: "We are delighted to have been awarded this prestigious contract with the Bank of England. Our team has provided excellent operational delivery over many years, and they have a deep understanding of the Bank's unique requirements. This, together with our suite of innovative and added-value initiatives, allowed us to demonstrate a compelling proposal for the Bank."
