

Serco amongst the finalists in five categories at the 2024 Women in Tech Employer Awards

1 year ago

Serco has been selected to be among the finalists at the prestigious Women in Tech Employer Awards 2024.

With a strong track record of supporting women in technology and a continuous commitment to creating an inclusive workplace in the tech industry, we are honoured to be named as finalists within the following categories:

- Best Employer (over 1,000 employees)

This award recognises employers with 250-1,000 employees who have demonstrated an outstanding effort over the past 18 months to attract and retain women in their IT/ Technology departments.

- Best Employer Network – Serco’s internal “Women in Tech” network

This award celebrates the opportunities and empowerment created by the structure of a women’s network.

- Outstanding Advocate for Women in Tech

This award recognises an influential person who is an advocate for women in tech. This person is an ally for gender diversity in tech and works hard to raise awareness in the tech industry.

Serco employee nominated:

Emma Woollon, Director – Transformation, Risk & Supplier Management, Data, Digital and Technology, Serco UK & Europe)

- Outstanding Woman in Tech

This award recognises an influential woman working in tech who is inspiring to her colleagues and team, and is a role model to other women in tech.

Serco employees nominated:

Natalie Procter, Business Unit Service Partner – Citizen Services, Transport & Community Services, Data, Digital and Technology, Serco UK & Europe

Àurea Cors Espinal, Serco MetOp-SG Spacecraft Analyst at EUMETSAT)

- Best In-House Recruiter

This award recognises the individual for whom the sky is the limit in terms of their drive to inspire women to succeed in the sector. It celebrates the individual who has a true passion for women in technology, is contributing to closing the gender pay gap by placing women in tech roles, and who is continually helping encourage women in the workplace.

Employee nominated:

Tony Wilson, Serco Talent Acquisition Director – Europe

Women in Tech Employer Awards is a recognition program dedicated to celebrating and promoting the achievements of women in the technology industry. The initiative not only honours individual women who excel in their respective roles but also recognises organisations that are actively working to create more inclusive and supportive environments for women in tech.

Serco is proud to not only be a key sponsor of the Women in Tech Employer Awards, helping to make this important event possible but also to have been recognised as a finalist for the second time since 2022.

This year, we are especially honored to have our Talent Acquisition Director for Europe, Tony Wilson, selected as one of the esteemed judges, further underscoring our commitment to advancing diversity and excellence in the tech industry.

The awards night will be held on 12th November 2024 and will offer a unique chance for networking and entertainment.

Read more about the Women in Tech Employer Awards here.