

Top score for Q3 at Double Eleven

1 year ago

Q3 has secured a three plus two-year, hard services, contract with the Middlesbrough based game developer, Double Eleven.

Since it was formed in 2009, Double Eleven has grown to be one of the most trusted video game developers, working on popular games such as Rust Console Edition, Grounded and Prison Architect.

Q3 will be delivering a range of mechanical and electrical services to Double Eleven's new Boho X flagship, head office. The Boho X building lies in the heart of Middlesbrough's digital services quarter and is now home to around 300 employees.

Matthew Harris, Facilities Manager at Double Eleven said, "Q3 went into great detail during the site visit and has a proven delivery model. We liked their approach, and the fact that they will be delivering the contract through a local team."

Commenting on the award, Martyn Freeman, CEO of Q3 Services, said, "We are delighted to be working with Double Eleven, and look forward to developing a strong partnership as they continue their exciting expansion."
