

It's the final countdown: Smart Buildings Show 2024 promises to be better than ever!

7 months ago

The final countdown is now on for Smart Buildings Show 2024, which takes place on 9th-10th October at ExCeL London.

Smart Buildings Show connects visitors to the latest information and technology in the smart buildings industry, while the conference gives visitors free access to the best speakers from across the sector.

The UK's largest commercial smart buildings event promises to be bigger and better than ever – and there is still time to register for your free attendance. More than 2,000 visitors attended Smart Buildings Show last year and with another conference programme packed full of relevant information, guidance and discussion, there is plenty on offer to a wide range of professionals working in the built environment.

Event director Ian Garmeson said: "It's not long now until the show doors open to give visitors access to the very latest smart technology which is playing a vital role in making our buildings more functional, comfortable and energy efficient. It promises to be the best Smart Buildings Show yet and I am looking forward to getting a glimpse of the latest innovations on the market from some of the biggest names in the industry."

Full information about the venue, accommodation, exhibitors and conference programme can be found on the Smart Buildings Show website: <https://smartbuildingsshow.com>