

OCS Appoints Andy Robbins as Director of Security, Risk, and Resilience

10 months ago

OCS has announced Andy Robbins's promotion to the role of Director of Security, Risk, and Resilience for OCS UK & Ireland.

In this key leadership position, Andy will shape and direct OCS's strategic approach to security, ensuring robust protection and resilience for colleagues, customers, and communities. With over a decade of experience at OCS and a distinguished 38-year career in security, Andy brings an exceptional depth of knowledge.

His journey began in the police force, where he rose from constable to Detective Chief Inspector (DCI) and Senior Investigative Officer (SIO). Andy has managed complex security operations across public and private sectors, excelling in risk mitigation, threat assessments, and crisis management. He has led security strategies for high-profile sites and events, working closely with government bodies and law enforcement agencies, earning him recognition as a trusted authority in security.

Andy will be instrumental in guiding OCS's response to emerging security threats in his new role. He will ensure the business remains at the forefront of security innovation and fully aligned with regulatory changes, such as Martyn's Law, which will set new security standards for publicly accessible locations. His leadership will be vital in maintaining the highest levels of compliance and operational excellence while influencing industry-wide policy and best practices. A core focus of Andy's role will be collaboration with OCS's technology and security operations teams, driving the adoption of advanced technological solutions to enhance security frameworks. With technology increasingly critical to adequate security, Andy's expertise in integrating physical and digital strategies will be vital to the continued success of OCS's operations.

Andy's remit also spans OCS's Security, Private Sector, and Public Sector Facilities Management (FM) divisions, where he will provide strategic direction and proactive risk management. His role goes beyond day-to-day operations, strongly emphasising anticipating and mitigating risks before they materialise. Andy's crisis management expertise will bolster OCS's assurance to its colleagues, customers, and the broader community during critical incidents.

OCS is confident that Andy's leadership and vast experience will significantly strengthen its security capabilities, positioning the company as a leading authority in the sector.

Steven Moore, Managing Director of Security, UK, commented: "Andy Robbins's extensive experience and alignment with OCS make him ideally suited for this role. His expertise in managing complex security operations and adapting to an evolving risk landscape will be vital as we strengthen our security strategies for customers across the UK and Ireland. We are excited to announce this important appointment, which will benefit colleagues and customers of the Security, Private Sector, and Public Sector divisions."

Andy Robbins, Director of Security, Risk, and Resilience, UK & Ireland, added: "Having worked with OCS for several years, first as a consultant and more recently in the Private Sector FM division, I have seen first-hand the importance of a strong, adaptive security approach. I look forward to building on the work we've achieved so far. We will continue delivering the highest standards of safety, resilience, and cutting-edge security solutions, providing OCS customers with a centre of excellence in security."