

Litmus partnership appoints Candice Finn as Managing Director

2 years ago

The leading food service, purchasing solutions and facilities management consultancy, The Litmus Partnership, which operates across sectors including Education, B&I and Healthcare, has announced Candice Finn as its new Managing Director. Finn, 44, who has held the role of Commercial Development Director at Litmus for two years, will be taking the reins with immediate effect.

Finn brings a wealth of experience to her new position garnered from senior roles at Sodexo, BaxterStorey and MITIE.

Involved in Litmus' business growth strategy over the past two years, Finn has already played an integral part in steering the direction of the business, including recently launching Litmus Edge, their new end-to-end purchase to pay (P2P) and catering management system to support in-house catering operations.

Candice Finn, newly appointed Managing Director at Litmus, said: "It's been a fantastic two years with Litmus so far, and we've collectively achieved a huge amount of development and success. The last 24 months have been about laying the groundwork for what will be an incredibly exciting next phase of Litmus' business growth. Our focus will be on nurturing the new and exciting areas of the business, including developing and supporting innovative purchasing solutions for our clients and harnessing the power of technology, data intelligence and digital innovations, as well as continuing to provide industry leading food service and facilities management consultancy across multiple sectors, whether outsourced or self-delivered.

"Since day one, I have been welcomed into the Litmus fold by everyone, and we've all worked together to get to where we are today. It's an honour to be trusted with leading the business forwards into the next phase, and I look forward to continuing to work as a team to achieve our goals.”

Tim Cookson, Chairman of the Litmus Partnership, commented: “We’re delighted to appoint Candice as our new Managing Director. Since she joined us as a board member and Commercial Development Director, her business acumen, skills and tenacity have been instrumental in driving us forward. We’ve always said unrivalled talent amongst our team is one of the things that sets us apart and Litmus is in incredibly good hands.”
