

Tom Morgan to take the helm of CBRE's Operational Real Estate Team

1 year ago

Global real estate advisor, CBRE, has promoted Tom Morgan to Head of Operational Real Estate (OPRE), effective January 1.

In his new position, Tom will drive further growth for CBRE's UK OPRE business, which comprises healthcare, hotels, pubs, leisure, self storage and automotive & roadside. He will work closely with the wider OPRE leadership team to provide integrated solutions for clients at a time of improved investor interest in the sector. The OPRE Valuation team will continue to be led by Al McCutcheon.

Tom, who is an Executive Director, joined CBRE 17 years ago and has primarily been responsible for developing and growing the firm's healthcare offering across the UK which today, boasts a national team of sector experts providing valuation, consultancy and transactional advice to clients. David Batchelor, former Head of Operational Real Estate, will move into a chairman role within the UK business, focused on the investment market.

Tom Morgan, Head of Operational Real Estate, said: "I've been fortunate to work in this team for many years, surrounded by 150 specialists with unrivalled property, operational and financial expertise. OPRE is now an established sector and I'm hugely excited to take over from David's outstanding leadership tenure as we enter the next phase of growth."
