

SEP Drainage strengthens senior leadership to drive national growth

7 months ago

SEP Drainage, a recently established name in the drainage and industrial services sector, has announced three pivotal leadership roles designed to secure what Company Director Rikki Morrow describes as a “strategic advantage” for the year ahead.

Mike Hampson and Cirk Newton both step in as Senior Operations Managers, overseeing the company’s drainage capabilities across the North West and North East of England, respectively.

Their combined industry background is expected to minimise disruptions on client sites and maintain the highest safety standards. Rikki emphasised that the duo’s proven expertise will help projects progress swiftly and securely, stating, “Their track records bring exactly the level of commitment we need for operations, ensuring timely turnarounds and peace of mind for our clients.”

Further bolstering the industrial services arm, Mark Loughran joins as UK Operations Manager, bringing over three decades of experience in industrial and environmental decontamination.

He is set to advance the firm’s reach into sectors such as Oil & Gas, Construction and Manufacturing. Reflecting on this addition, Rikki underlined that Loughran’s know-how will spearhead growth and innovation, noting, “He firmly believes success is only as strong as your most recent project outcome, and that philosophy aligns with our drive to deliver on time, every time.”

The company’s leadership believes these appointments lay a robust foundation for expansion throughout the UK, setting the stage for an impressive year marked by service excellence and client-centric solutions.
