

The Cheeky Panda launches NEW period pads & pantyliners for B2B clients in schools and offices

4 months ago

The Cheeky Panda, a pioneer in sustainable hygiene products, is proud to announce the launch of its new Period Pads and Pantyliners, specifically designed for B2B clients in education and workplace environments. This expansion reinforces the company's commitment to providing high-quality, sustainable alternatives to conventional hygiene products.

Recognising the increasing demand for environmentally friendly and accessible menstrual care solutions in schools and offices. The Cheeky Panda's pads feature a biodegradable bamboo top lining and the UK's first 100% bamboo core (patent pending!), these products eliminate the need for plastic-based SAPs found in most pads, using bamboo's natural absorbency to deliver high leak-proof performance. They're also packaged in biodegradable cornstarch wrappers to further reduce plastic waste.

"As organisations and educational institutions prioritise inclusivity and sustainability, we wanted to offer a product that meets both needs," said Chris Forbes, Co-Founder of The Cheeky Panda. "Our bamboo period pads are designed to provide comfort, protection, and peace of mind, while also reducing waste and environmental impact."

By providing an eco-conscious alternative, The Cheeky Panda empowers schools, offices, and other public spaces to take a step towards greener hygiene solutions, helping businesses meet sustainability targets and support their employees and students with high-quality, ethical menstrual care.

The products also come with a neat bamboo tray or a metal dispenser for high use areas.