Workday Inc., the AI platform for managing people, money, and agents, has announced that Churchill Group has selected Workday Human Capital Management (HCM) and Workday Payroll to help streamline HR operations and deliver a more seamless employee experience for its 17,000-strong workforce.

Churchill Group is the second largest employee-owned company in the UK. It specialises in providing essential cleaning, security, and front-line services to businesses and organisations nationwide. With a business model focused on putting people first, Churchill sought a modern, scalable platform to support ambitious growth and empower its workforce.

“Churchill’s workforce is at the heart of everything we do. We wanted a technology partner that understands the needs of essential workers and can help us deliver a seamless, modern experience. Workday will simplify key HR and payroll processes, giving our teams better access to critical information and letting us focus on delivering outstanding service to our clients,” said James Bradley, CEO, Churchill Group.

“Churchill is showing what it means to put people first. By choosing Workday, they’re investing in technology that simplifies operations and empowers essential workers with greater visibility, access, and control. We’re proud to support their growth and help them build a more connected, agile, and people-first business,” said Dan Pell, Vice President and UKI Country Leader, Workday.

This partnership reflects Workday’s continued growth in the facilities management sector and demonstrates the increasing demand for modern, employee-centric HR and payroll solutions.
