10 months ago

Bidvest Noonan, a leading provider of FM services to the transport sector across the UK and Ireland, has expanded its long-standing partnership with Translink, Northern Ireland's public transport provider.

The business retained its cleaning services contract and added catering support and consumable supplies. This is the latest in a growing number of customers who have transitioned to bundled and integrated solutions, reflecting a wider trend across the organisation.

David Barker, Chief Growth Officer at Bidvest Noonan, said: "This expansion reflects the incredible service our teams deliver and the strength of our business in Northern Ireland. We're seeing real momentum in bundled and integrated solutions as more organisations look to manage costs, reduce complexity, and improve outcomes."

Operating an extensive network of bus and rail services, Translink is one of Northern Ireland's most significant public service organisations. It plays a critical role in connecting communities, supporting the economy, and advancing sustainable transport across the region.

This expanded contract marks a major milestone in Bidvest Noonan's partnership with Translink, which began in 2012. It reflects the continued success of Bidvest Noonan's teams in delivering exceptional service and its growing role in the region's transport sector.

As part of the new multiservice agreement, Bidvest Noonan will introduce a suite of innovations to support operational efficiency and enhance the passenger experience. These include robotic cleaning solutions, sensor-based monitoring, and non-chemical cleaning systems, all designed to deliver cleaner, safer, and more sustainable environments.

Bidvest Noonan will also implement a range of sustainability initiatives to reduce environmental impact. These include cutting plastic and packaging use, switching to green product alternatives, and eliminating harmful chemicals from cleaning processes.

The contract also paves the way for new community engagement initiatives, beginning with a social value programme at the landmark Grand Central Station in Belfast. Through this programme, Bidvest Noonan and Translink aim to make a lasting, positive impact across the communities they serve.

Jim O'Hagan, Managing Director for Northern Ireland at Bidvest Noonan, said: "We are incredibly proud to expand our partnership with Translink. This is a flagship, multiservice contract for us in Northern Ireland, and its retention and growth reflect the trust we've built through years of strong performance. By delivering a broader range of services, we're able to deliver greater value and create even better experiences for passengers and colleagues alike."

This contract forms part of Bidvest Noonan's growing portfolio of major transport partnerships across the UK and Ireland, reinforcing its position as a market leader in delivering high-performing FM services for the transport sector.
