

Allegion UK celebrate excellence in scheduling as return sponsor of GAI Education Awards

8 months ago

Allegion UK returns as sponsor for this year's Diploma in Scheduling award at the Guild of Architectural Ironmongers (GAI) Education Awards, taking place at London's Grand Connaught Rooms on Thursday 20th November.

This year's ceremony marks the 45th GAI Education Awards, which is recognised as a flagship event in the annual architectural ironmongery calendar and for the second year running, Allegion UK is sponsoring this award to celebrate the outstanding achievements of the rising stars of the industry.

Speaking on Allegion's returning role as sponsor, Pete Hancox, Country Manager at Allegion UK commented: "Allegion has long been a champion of professional development within the architectural ironmongery industry, and our ongoing support of the GAI Education Programme reflects our commitment to elevating standards, encouraging education and fostering new talent."

The GAI Education Awards is a prestigious industry event, and in continuing our role as sponsor we aim to support and nurture the next generation of industry leaders. DipGAI is recognised worldwide, and we are incredibly proud to celebrate both the exceptional individual achievement this award represents, and most importantly, the pivotal role the Guild plays in our industry."

For more information on the 45th GAI Education Awards, visit:

www.gai.org.uk/GAI/GAI/GAIEducationAwards/GAI-Education-Awards-2025.aspx