

Bellrock acquires MW Lift Services to strengthen in-house engineering

2 months ago

Bellrock has announced the acquisition of MW Lift Services, a trusted lift engineering specialist that provides installation, refurbishment, maintenance and 24/7 call-out services across the UK.

The business has built a strong reputation for reliability, safety and quality, working with both commercial and public sector clients. This partnership marks the next step in Bellrock's growth strategy and creates new opportunities to deliver an even more joined-up service for our customers.

MW Lift Services will join Bellrock's Critical Engineering business unit, led by Managing Director Collette Fellows. Critical Engineering delivers technical services that keep buildings safe, compliant and efficient, including fire safety systems, HVAC and mechanical maintenance.

Why this acquisition matters

This acquisition strengthens Bellrock's self-delivery model and brings a dedicated in-house lift capability to the group. By combining lift engineering with our existing Fire and HVAC expertise, we'll improve consistency, control and efficiency across our portfolio. Customers will benefit from more integrated support and a wider range of technical services, enhanced by intelligent data insights and Bellrock's national delivery network.

Joining Bellrock gives us the platform to grow faster and deliver even more value to our customers. We've always been proud of the strong relationships we've built and the quality of our engineering, and now we have the scale, systems and support to take that to the next level.' – Mick Winter, Managing Director, MW Lift Services

‘Welcoming MW Lift Services to the group is an important step in strengthening our self-delivery model within Critical Engineering. Their proven lift expertise adds a vital piece to our end-to-end building services offer, helping us deliver greater quality, consistency and value for every client.’– Carlo Alloni, CEO, Bellrock
