6 months ago

EMCOR UK has received the Sustainable Facilities Management Index (SFMI) Gold Award for the third consecutive year. The accreditation follows an extensive assessment that includes more than 300 questions across 23 criteria that align with major ESG frameworks and are highly relevant to the FM industry.

The SFMI gave EMCOR UK an overall score of 83.64 per cent, calculated as the average of its scores across the three key areas of the report: governance, society, and the environment.

EMCOR UK was praised for its social value development, including its introduction of structured social value-led meetings with customers of large sites. These touchpoints discuss customers' social value needs and ambitions, to adapt plans, align customer and supplier objectives, share best practice, and leverage existing initiatives.

EMCOR UK also received mention for its internal app that keeps staff better informed and supported as they go through the TUPE process, creating touchpoints at every step in the process of transferring employers, to reduce stress and increase contract productivity.

Kam Singh, executive director – ESG at EMCOR UK, said: “Participating in the SFMI has allowed us to develop a tangible improvement plan across all relevant aspects of sustainability within our organisation. Winning gold for the third year in a row reaffirms that we are on the right track across all aspects of ESG, as detailed in our strategic plan.”
