

15 Years of NICEIC Accreditation for Guardian

2 months ago

Guardian Electrical Compliance Ltd, a PTSG company and the UK's leading provider of electrical safety services, is celebrating a significant milestone – 15 years of continuous NICEIC accreditation. The achievement underscores the company's unwavering commitment to the highest standards of quality, competence and professionalism in electrical compliance.

NICEIC accreditation, awarded by the UK's leading voluntary regulatory body for the electrotechnical industry, provides independent assurance that electrical contractors meet the demanding technical and safety standards required to carry out electrical installation work. For our clients this accreditation provides confidence that every inspection and test is delivered to the very highest standard.

Mark Mitchell, Managing Director for Electrical Services at PTSG, explained: "Reaching 15 years of NICEIC accreditation is something the whole team should be enormously proud of. It reflects not just our technical capability, but our culture – a genuine commitment to doing things right, every single time. Our clients trust us to keep their people and places safe and this milestone is a mark of that trust being well placed.

Central to Guardian's service offering is TraQ-it, the industry's only truly interactive web-based electrical compliance reporting system. Developed and refined over many years, TraQ-it ensures that electrical safety records are always current, accurate, and consolidated – with a full version history and innovative QR code technology that gives maintenance teams instant access to distribution board reports via smartphone.

The 15-year NICEIC accreditation milestone stands as a proud marker – a nationwide team of trusted experts, an uncompromising approach to quality and a deep-rooted commitment to keeping people, places and systems safe.
