Amey has appointed Jonathan Goring as Executive Advisor to help shape the company's next phase of growth, supporting its ambitions in priority sectors and enhancing the value it delivers to clients.

With a career spanning infrastructure, the built environment, government programmes, and major capital projects, Jonathan has operated at the most senior levels of industry, including CEO, board and programme leadership roles. He has worked across both the UK and international markets, leading complex organisations and delivering large-scale transformation and growth initiatives. His background includes senior positions with Capita, Morgan Sindall, PA Consulting, Mott MacDonald and Systra, as well as key leadership roles on major programmes including HS2 and NEOM.

As part of his role as Executive Advisor, Jonathan will focus on strengthening the front end of the Consulting pipeline, working across the business to shape and accelerate strategic growth in new and existing markets. This will include supporting activity across key contracts and frameworks, enabling entry into new sectors and markets, and helping to unlock opportunities for international growth.

Working closely with senior leaders across the business, he will also play a key role in aligning business development activity, enhancing cross discipline collaboration, and ensuring the organisation is well positioned to build long-term relationships with clients, partners and suppliers.

Jonathan Goring, Executive Advisor for Amey, said: "I am delighted to be joining Amey at a time of strong ambition and opportunity for its Consulting business. Amey has a strong track record in delivering complex programmes, and I am looking forward to contributing to that by supporting the development of new opportunities and helping to bring clarity to some of the most challenging projects facing clients today.”

Colin Wood, Consulting Managing Director for Amey, added: “We are delighted to welcome Jonathan to Amey at an important point in the growth of our Consulting business. He brings a wealth of experience in leading complex programmes and driving growth across a range of markets. His appointment strengthens our ability to identify and convert strategic opportunities, while continuing to build the partnerships and capability needed to deliver the best possible outcomes for our clients and communities.”

The appointment announcement reflects Amey’s continued focus on combining strong market insight with delivery capability and follows the recent appointments of Gert Vermeiren as Sector Director for Engineering and Stephen Knott as Chief Operations Director.
