New partnership strengthens JSM Group's commitment to inclusion, talent development and greater representation across the utilities sector.

JSM Group has joined the Womens Utilities Network (WUN), reinforcing its commitment to creating an inclusive workplace and supporting greater diversity across the utilities sector.

WUN is a leading industry network dedicated to creating a utilities sector where women join, stay and thrive. Through its programmes, events and industry partnerships, WUN supports organisations to attract, develop and retain talented women, while helping to drive positive change across the sector.

As JSM continues to grow across the UK and internationally, membership of WUN reflects the Group's ongoing commitment to supporting its people and helping build a more representative workforce for the industries it serves. The partnership will provide access to a broad network of industry professionals, development opportunities and best practice to strengthen JSM's approach to inclusion and talent development.

The utilities sector faces significant infrastructure and investment challenges over the coming years, alongside increasing demand for skilled people. Creating environments where everybody can succeed will be critical to meeting those challenges and securing the future workforce the industry needs.

Michael Booth, Chief Executive Officer of JSM Group, said: "Joining the Women's Utilities Network is an important step for JSM. As our business continues to grow, we recognise that attracting, developing and retaining diverse talent is essential to our long-term success and to the future of the utilities sector.

“WUN is doing valuable work to support women across our industry, and we are proud to be part of a network that is helping create meaningful opportunities, champion equality and inspire the next generation of talent.”

Commenting on the new partnership, WUN advocate Lyvia Nabarro said: “On behalf of WUN, I am delighted to be welcoming JSM Group as one of our new partners. As we look at the scale of infrastructure and investment needs the utilities sector is facing and the people we need to deliver our ambitious plans, it’s essential that we are exploring ways to attract and support women joining and thriving in the sector. JSM Group’s commitment to offering meaningful opportunities and forging gender equality is exactly what we need to see more of.”

Through this partnership, JSM looks forward to collaborating with industry peers, sharing best practice and helping drive positive change that benefits both its people and the wider utilities sector.
